Simona Chin Campbell

Paralympic Rowing

Simona Chin Campbell (b. 1980) became a coxswain for the men's rowing team when she was a freshman at Stanford University. She competed in the 2008 Beijing Paralympic Games where the team won a silver medal. Chin Campbell was the coxswain on a mixed four team. Her teammates had a variety of disability classifications: one was blind, one had a below-the-knee prosthesis on one leg, one had cerebral palsy, and one had Erb's palsy. Chin Campbell is currently the Associate Director at Georgetown University's McDonough School of Business.
