Judy May Chu

(b. July 7, 1953)

Judy grew up in south Los Angeles, a predominantly African American neighborhood. She became mayor of Monterey Park, California for three terms from 1988 to 2001. Subsequently, she was the first Chinese American woman to be elected to Congress in 2009. Among her many accomplishments while serving in office are introducing the Congressional resolution of regret for the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882 that passed in 2012; advocating for the San Gabriel Mountains to be a national monument; and requiring the Department of Defense to address military hazing. In 2018, the Grammys honored her as a legislator who advocated for music creators' rights. Judy's top priorities are immigration reform, women's rights, civil and voting rights, and healthcare.
