

Joyce Bantugan (SFSU 2018)

Juanita Tamayo Lott

1968: Student; PACE member

2018: Retired Senior Federal Demographer/Statistician

1968-1969 was a more innocent period before social media It was a period where golden children were the first to go to college in their families; were more humble and appreciative of our parents' sacrifices to send us to college despite long standing institutional racism; and were more sensitive to the larger needs of our lower income and middle class communities. We believed in making love not war. We believed we would transform and prevail.

Juanita Tamayo Lott, Golden Children: Legacy of Ethnic Studies, SF State (2019), p. xv.